

Tyson Foods, Inc.

Proof of Common Law Marriage

I request that you consider the following information in determining the eligibility of my common law marriage for group insurance coverage issued by Tyson Foods, Inc.

We have been living together as husband and wife and each of us recognize the other as his/her common law spouse and we represent ourselves to the public as being married to each other. Neither of us were married to anyone else at the time of the consummation of this common law marriage, and we otherwise were of legal age and had full capacity to marry.

As further evidence of our common law marriage, as described above, I offer copies of our most recently filed Federal or State income tax returns: Married Filing Jointly or Married Filing Separately.

I understand that once our common law marriage has been recognized by Tyson Foods, Inc., for purposes of group insurance coverage, the only way it can be dissolved is through a legal divorce.

If a person covered under the Plan (or someone seeking coverage on behalf of a person) performs an act, practice or omission that constitutes fraud, or makes an intentional misrepresentation of material fact, the Plan reserves the right to rescind (i.e., retroactively cancel) coverage for the covered person. This includes, but is not limited to, intentionally submitting an application or filing a claim containing a false, incomplete, or misleading statement or otherwise intentionally providing false, incomplete or misleading information to the Plan. The Plan also reserves the right to pursue all legal and equitable remedies against such a person. Any such person who is a Tyson TEAM Member is subject to discipline up to and including termination of employment. Tyson Foods reserves the right that any such person make the Plan whole.
